March 2020 For immediate release

A Woman's View – new magazine by and for women in the prison system

- Written by women for women in the criminal justice system
- Dedicated to our solicitors, advocates, families, friends and supporters
- 80% of women in prison have a mental health issue
- Women need advocates for rehabilitation and reintegration if cycle of offence and incarceration is to be ended
- International Women's Day is Sunday 8 March all women need to be supported #EachForEqual

What would you do if a woman in your life received a custodial sentence? Help her and yourself to demystify the complex English criminal justice system with a new magazine - specifically for women prisoners and their supporters.

Prison Law solicitors Reece Thomas Watson and the editorial board of The View Magazine have announced the publication of The View - a magazine devoted to women in prison and everyone affected by the criminal justice system.

The View is the only magazine of its kind in the UK containing content written by women prisoners and those on license in the community (with contributions from their families, lawyers and supporters). The magazine will be distributed at no charge to serving women prisoners.

It is supported by leading prison law firm, Reece Thomas Watson as well as many of the leading legal chambers and criminal law firms in England including Courtenay Griffiths QC.

The View contains heartfelt content, including poems, prose and the artwork of some 40 women prisoners. The launch issue focuses on issues of unlawful detention following recall and ongoing IPP (Indeterminate Public Protection). Featured in The View is a 'solutions-led' content by leading advocates, providing vital legal information to prisoners and their supporters, such as how to access the finest legal help and charitable resources.

The magazine has a human-rights based approach to how women should be treated in English prisons. Included are case studies showing where HM Government and its agencies are failing. For women finding themselves trapped in the criminal justice system; The View offers them new 'self-soothing' techniques, including meditation, 'self-grounding', mindfulness, writing and art therapy.

This innovative approach will enable such women to get through imprisonment, probation and parole, armed with a knowledge of their rights and responsibilities. This will lead to fewer difficult times within the prison environment and more chance of successful reintegration.

"The View is an essential and beautifully produced toolkit for women prisoners to survive prison and come out unbroken. I am proud to support this venture and I believe it will equip women and the larger public to become more informed about the state of the women's estate and the issues such as being hundreds of miles from their children and families that women prisoners endure," says Baroness Uddin, the magazine's Patron.

"Women in prison are uniquely powerless because they are detained in places that are largely designed and controlled by men. The View is a great idea, it advocates for women in prison and will be a force for positive change to bring prisoners and those who run them together through creativity." – Ian Acheson, former prison governor and Government Terrorism Expert

Features and benefits of The View Magazine include.

- Uncensored content by and for women prisoners shining a light on treatment and conditions in women's prisons
- All content submitted by serving prisoners is paid for, and available to the prisoner to spend upon release for resettlement purposes
- Insights into policy and guidelines that should be followed while a woman is imprisoned and commentary and advocacy by leading crime, public law and human rights advocates

The View Magazine will be available from 8 March 2020, at £4.95 per copy plus P&P or £20 per year for 4 copies. For more information on The View, visit www.theviewmag.org.uk

About

About The View Magazine: an editorial committee that includes the finest broadsheet journalists and the top human rights barrister (QC) in England, with substantial lived experience inclusion, The View is published 4 times a year, and is a 64 page full colour A4 magazine. It is printed on responsibly sourced, recyclable paper and uses only non toxic inks. With a print run of 6 000 (reach approx 25 000) the magazine is distributed in all English women's prisons at no charge to the women and is also available in bookshops and newsagents across England. It is also available by subscription.

Assets

Folder containing the Winter issue of the magazine, artwork, a video explaining the magazine, and an interview is available here - http://bit.ly/TheViewPR

Contact Clare Simms Editor The View Magazine email - hello@theviewmag.org.uk Francesca Baker – press Telephone 07877461555 email - fbaker@live.co.uk